9:00am

How to establish international and cross-cultural research collaborations

🕒 9:00am - 11:30am, Feb 2

This workshop will bring together junior and senior scholars experienced in conducting cross-cultural research collaborations in personality and social psychology with international teams. They will share different models for carrying out cross-cultural research collaborations and discuss with the audience challenges of and best practices in international collaborations.

🗣️ Speakers

Rim Saab Lecturer, University of Sussex

M. Lynne Cooper Univ. of Missouri

Fouad Bouzeineddine University of Innsbruck

Amber Gayle Thalmayer Assistant Professor, University of Zürich

Ara Norenzayan Professor, Univ. of British Columbia

Ayse Uskul Professor of Social Psychology, Univ. of Kent

How the sausage is made: Best practices in survey operations

🕒 9:00am - 11:30am, Feb 4

This workshop will share best practices in fielding surveys that are based on survey methods research, bench wisdom and psychological theory. Fred Conrad will provide an overview of important principles in questionnaire design. Erica Yu will describe how to test the performance of survey instruments. Jesse

Chandler will talk about selecting appropriate samples and maximizing response rates.

Asian/Pacific Islander/Desi Community in Solidarity for Black Liberation

🕒 3:00pm - 5:30pm, Feb 7

This workshop offers a space for Asian, Pacific Islander, & Desi-identified psychologists to work together toward Black liberation. Panel discussion of Academics 4 Black Lives will be followed by break-out sessions for attendees to reflect, connect, and brainstorm actionable steps. We will share ideas, create accountability groups, work on actions, and build community.

9:00am

Disrupting Racism and Eurocentrism in Methods and Practices

🕒 9:00am - 11:30am, Feb 8

Learn concrete strategies for disrupting racism and eurocentrism in your research methods and practices. Leave with a toolkit to address questions like: How can I create more diverse and inclusive collaborations? How do I write a positionality statement? What are the most common ways in which authors and reviewers perpetuate racism, and how can I counteract them?

🗣️ Speaker

Alison Ledgerwood Professor and Chancellor's Fellow, UC Davis

A more meaningful statistical inference using Minimum-Effect Significance Testing

🕒 8:00am - 10:30am, Feb 9

Is an effect large enough to matter, too small to be of consequence, or lacking sufficient data to make a determination? This workshop outlines a simple yet versatile approach for answering these questions by overcoming the hurdles that prevented Minimum-Effect Significance Testing (MEST) from being used widely, and by integrating it with Equivalence Testing (EqT) in a unified framework.

10:00am

Conducting Experimental Behavioural Research using a Mock Social Media Website

🕒 10:00am - 1:00pm, Feb 10

This workshop will guide attendees on how to use the Mock Social Media Website Tool (see <https://docs.studysocial.media/docs/intro>) to build and customize studies that collect experimental, behavioural data on how participants interact with simulated social media posts. We will go step-by-step in setting up the tool locally and give practical advice on tailoring it for different research designs.

Conflict and Conflict Resolution

 7:00am - 12:30pm, Feb 16

Conflict is ubiquitous across time and place and has important consequences for everyone involved. This preconference will bring together eminent and rising scholars to share recent theory and findings in the area of conflict and conflict resolution. We invite scholars studying the precursors, nature, and consequences of interpersonal, organizational, and intergroup conflict, as well as strategies for managing past and ongoing conflict in more constructive versus destructive ways. We also encourage presentations addressing multiple goals of conflict resolution, such as justice, equity, performance, relationship functioning, personal wellbeing, and the reduction of prejudice and discrimination. Sessions will be structured to permit constructive discussion of research, future directions, and practical implications for interventions. In addition to full research talks, this preconference will feature a data-blitz and panel session. We look forward to seeing you there!

7:30am

Sustainability Psychology

🕒 7:30am - 6:30pm, Feb 16

Welcome to the 11th annual Sustainability Psychology Preconference! This year's theme is "The Synergy of Psychological Theory and Environmental Impact." Sustainability psychologists wrangle with the merits of basing research in theoretical contributions to social psychology or in impact to climate change and other environmental issues. Our preconference will showcase exemplary research based in both theory and impact. It will include an expert panel discussion on bridging the two; how to use theory and impact to inform and strengthen the other. Our preconference includes a keynote address, invited speaker sessions on theory, impact, and translating the two, blitz and poster sessions, and networking time.

We invite researchers and practitioners, whether newcomers or established, to help us explore the latest research on environmental psychology, from understanding related theories such as group processes, habits, and social norms, to examining interventions to encourage climate change mitigation, resource conservation, and the maintenance of biodiversity.

7:45am

Intervention Science

🕒 7:45am - 3:15pm, Feb 16

The Intervention Science preconference brings together researchers interested in turning psychology outward to understand and address pressing societal issues. In 2022, we will showcase intervention research using diverse theoretical and methodological approaches to tackle social problems, including a discussion on ways to translate basic research into scalable interventions that have real-world impact. We also invite abstract submissions for our poster session open to all applicants and for an early career data blitz session open to graduate students or recent PhDs.

25 Subsessions

- Using research on self-regulation to understand and tackle the challenges that owners face helping their (overweight) dogs to lose weight
🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16
- Agreeableness Drives Opposing Patterns of Right-Wing Disinformation Sharing Among Social and Economic Conservatives
🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16
- Who we are shapes how self- and other- interested we appear in the context of inequality messaging
🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16
- The effects of an acts-of-kindness intervention on daily social contact and belonging for lonely undergraduates who are new to university
🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16
- Reducing the Age Gap in Job Search: A Brief Self-Affirmation Intervention Boosts the Success of Older Job Seekers
🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16
- In-home assistive technology prevents declines in sleep quality in caregivers for people with dementia
🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16
- Examining the effectiveness of interventions to reduce discriminatory behavior at work: a meta-analysis

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16

- Personality-informed intervention design: Examining how trait regulation can inform efforts to change behavior

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16

- Provide Information or Encourage Follow-Through? Effects of Behavioral Interventions Depend on Baseline Motivation

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16

- Mindset Certainty and Resistance to Persuasive Messages

🕒 11:15am - 12:15pm, Feb 16

- Same method, divergent outcomes: group identity conditioning the effects of social norms-based interventions

8:00am

Applied

🕒 8:00am - 1:45pm, Feb 16

The Applied Preconference brings together individuals currently pursuing, or those interested in pursuing careers focused on the application of social and personality psychology. The preconference is a forum for sharing research focused on addressing real world problems. The program will provide attendees opportunities to consider the interplay between basic and applied research, and the many ways they can be involved. The program will also include a panel discussion featuring researchers at various career stages providing advice on how to navigate careers conducting applied research. Presentation formats include symposia, data blitzes, posters, and a panel discussion. We invite applications for data blitz talks and posters from advanced undergraduate and graduate students to researchers at all stages of their careers. We are eager to have presenters who are employed in various settings, including those conducting research in Industry, Nonprofits or Governmental organizations.

Ending Prejudice & Discrimination in Sport

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 16

Racism, sexism, homophobia, and other forms of discrimination remain systemic in sport settings. These problems have been extensively problematized by academics over the last half-century, but there has been little focus on solutions. This session will be designed to promote collaboration amongst scholars interested in identifying and understanding the psychosocial and contextual drivers of these problems, advancing theoretical development, and/or scholars conducting applied intervention research. A key outcome will be a co-developed paper/position statement outlining the need for a refocusing of research efforts towards finding evidence-based solutions. This paper will also outline why there is a strong need for social psychologists to contribute their unique knowledge of prejudice and expertise in experimental design to the global efforts to protect children from harmful discrimination in sport.

Teaching Personality & Social Psychology

🕒 8:00am - 1:30pm, Feb 16

Most SPSP members have or will have teaching-related responsibilities in social psychology or related specialties. This preconference focuses on these responsibilities based on best practices and findings from SoTL research. The Preconference provides programming supporting teaching at all levels (graduate students to senior faculty), emphasizes novel, empirically-supported techniques and content for teaching, provides opportunities for teachers to share effective practices, and addresses a variety of teaching issues and contexts. The goal of this preconference is for attendees to leave with specific, teaching-related ideas that can be implemented upon attendees' return from the preconference. This preconference is appropriate for those at every professional level from novice instructors who might be building courses for the first time to veteran faculty who continue to update courses. This preconference, sponsored by the Society for the Teaching of Psychology, has been held 19 straight years at SPSP, and attendees reliably consider it valuable and enjoyable.

The Psychology of Collectives

⌚ 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 16

The goal of this preconference is to bring together researchers who are interested in macro psychological processes occurring at the level of groups or crowds. Collective psychological processes are often the result of interactions between individuals, whose mutual influence leads to the emergence of outcomes that cannot be captured by the analysis of individuals as separate units. Research in collective psychology integrates insights from psychology, network science, and complexity theory, and experiments in this domain are often aided by computational simulations designed to capture the emerging properties of human interaction. We hope to use this forum to unite researchers from a variety of subdomains that fall under collective psychology, including collective intelligence, collective decision making (wisdom of the crowd), collective memory, and collective affect.

8:30am

Existential Psychology

⌚ 8:30am - 7:00pm, Feb 16

The science of existential psychology is focused on core issues of "being" and "becoming" in the study of human nature and social life—including such central dynamics as: the awareness of mortality; freedom, authenticity, and moral responsibility; culture, the self, and identity; objective and subjective isolation, uncertainty, and shared reality; and the quest for meaning and purpose in life. As the world emerges from over a year of intense suffering, loss, and sacrifice, the theme of this preconference will be to highlight theory and research exploring the role of key existential dynamics in physical and mental health, and the ways people make sense of suffering, adapt and cope, and potentially even experience personal growth.

Featured presentations will explore narrative identity and the redemptive self; the science of meaning; existential concerns and both physical and mental health; religious/spiritual struggles with suffering; suffering, scapegoating, and moral identity; and personal growth through adversity.

Political Psychology

🕒 6:00am - 1:40pm, Feb 17

The political psychology preconference brings together researchers to discuss topics in political cognition and behavior. The aims of the preconference are to facilitate the dissemination of cutting-edge research in political psychology, honor the leaders of the field, and promote the next generation of political psychologists. Back by popular demand, this year's pre-conference will again feature themed "mini-symposia", covering the following topics: (a) Field-Work & Real-World Interventions, (b) Beyond Left and Right – New Conceptualizations of Ideology, (c) The Politics and Psychology of Neo-Liberalism, and (d) Conspiracy Theories and Political Psychology. Each mini-symposia will include an extended discussion session with the audience. In addition to invited faculty speakers, we host a graduate student talk, data blitz, and poster sessions. Graduate students, postdoctoral scholars, and early career (i.e., pre-tenure) scholars are invited to submit proposals for data blitz and poster presentations.

7:45am

Health

🕒 7:45am - 1:30pm, Feb 17

The Health Preconference is a “hub” for SPSP attendees working across a diverse array of areas connecting social/personality processes to health. Indeed, many current topics in social/personality psychology have links to health and wellbeing, including group processes and intergroup relations, close relationships, self and identity, emotion, motivation, and, of course, interventions. Further, the global pandemic has illuminated the critical connections between social processes and health, and the Health Preconference will thus be an especially vital component of SPSP 2022 programming.

In addition to standard invited research presentations, the Health Preconference will include student and postdoc data blitzes, faculty/professional flash talks, round table discussions of both research and professional development topics, poster presentations, and other dynamic formats that actively involve attendees and leading research experts. Two student/postdoc travel awards will be presented, along with an Early Career Award.

Attitudes and Social Influence

⌚ 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

Evaluations have been central to social psychology since the field's earliest days. The Attitudes & Social Influence Preconference features speakers whose work addresses attitudinal effects and interventions designed to change people's evaluations and behavior. We value an interactive environment; thus, this preconference consists of 30-minute talks with a 15-minute Q&A session after each. The 2022 program will feature five invited speakers whose work approach attitudes and social influence from a variety of perspectives, including research on social influence, implicit measures, and attitude strength. In addition, there will be a panel discussion on the application of attitudes and social influence research in the field, a set of talks by graduate students and early career researchers, a poster session, and a presentation of two distinguished career awards.

Bringing Intragroup Processes Back to Social Psychology

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

The origins of social psychology can be traced back to early studies of intragroup processes by Lewin and others. In recent years, however, social psychologists have drifted away from the 'social' roots from which our field originated. In this unique preconference, we seek to re-invigorate research interest in the study of social interactions within groups. We will feature an array of speakers from social psychology as well as management and other disciplines (e.g., computer sciences) who are doing cutting edge work on intragroup processes, and we will conclude with a discussion on why social psychologists should be studying intragroup processes and why the area of intragroup processes would benefit from going back to its psychological roots.

Close Relationships

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

The Close Relationships Preconference brings together cutting-edge research and theory in relationship science across social and personality psychology. The preconference features award addresses, talks and data blitz presentations of new research, themed lunch tables, and a special session designed to generate discussion. We look forward to seeing you there!

Dynamics in Personality Development

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

The Dynamics in Personality Development Preconference takes an “unconference” approach featuring unconventional and interactive programming intended to encourage active involvement by all attendees. Like last year’s preconference, we will feature symposia on new directions in personality research using state-of-the-art methodology. The preconference will feature a discussion on new developments in the field, continued conversations on diversity in the field, as well as traditional symposium and data blitz to provide early career researchers to present new work.

Gender

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

The Gender Preconference brings together emerging and classic approaches to the social psychology of gender. Presentation formats include a keynote talk, symposia, data blitzes, and posters. Invited speakers will include early career rising stars through established scholars. This year’s symposia will focus on intersectionality and the development of gender stereotypes and attitudes. Data blitz sessions will feature 5-minute talks that highlight innovative work on “hot topics” of interest. The program will also include a poster session that offers additional opportunities for presenters to share their gender research in a relaxed atmosphere and, for the first time, a poster award session for student posters. We invite applications for data blitz talks and posters from students and academics at all stages of their careers.

Group Processes & Intergroup Relations

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

📍 Grand Ballroom A, Grand Ballroom Leve

The 2022 GPIR Pre-conference unites renowned scholars whose work demonstrates the importance of understanding intra and intergroup processes in the context of global uncertainty, fraught intergroup relations, and climate change. Scholars will share their knowledge on topics such as misinformation campaigns, stigmatized identities, belonging, and social change.

Happiness & Well-Being

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

The 9th Annual Happiness and Well-Being Preconference will continue its successful tradition of showcasing cutting-edge work in the science of well-being across a variety of perspectives. There will be experts in well-being science invited to share their latest work and discuss future directions for the field. Ample time will be allocated for audience questions and discussions around the invited speakers' work and claims. Both graduate and undergraduate students will have the opportunity to feature their work in data blitzes and poster sessions. During lunchtime, attendees will have the opportunity to further connect with speakers at mentorship tables, where they can discuss well-being research, methodological approaches, and professional development issues. Invited talks, data blitzes, and poster sessions will contain novel theoretical contributions, new research methodologies, and cutting-edge applications. Please join us for another year of happiness and well-being at SPSP 2022.

Justice and Morality

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

For 20 years, the justice and morality pre-conference has brought top scholars in the field to share their most recent findings and facilitate interdisciplinary dialogue. It presents a unique opportunity to connect two subareas that are thematically related, and yet typically studied independently. This year, in addition to featuring experts in both justice and morality, we are also attempting to highlight the work of people working at the intersection of both areas of research. Confirmed speakers include Mina Cikara, Daphna Oyserman, Taylor Philips, Nour Kteily, Taze Rai, Margaret Shih, and Jan Van Bavel. We are also seeking submissions from graduate students, post-docs and junior faculty who want to present a poster or a microtalk

Motivation Science

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

📍 Continental 7-9, Ballroom Level

This preconference will feature cutting-edge research in motivation science and its applications. The aim is to showcase the important work being done on motivation, goal pursuit, and self-regulation - and to provide networking, mentoring, and presentation opportunities to early-career scholars. The line-up includes invited speakers, who will give talks about motivation, from different social psychological perspectives, on theoretical as well applied topics. Graduate students and other early career researchers will have the opportunity to present data blitzes and posters. A panel of motivation scholars will discuss unresolved questions in motivation science, including unexplored topics and underlying 'big questions' in the field.

The tenth SPSP Nonverbal Preconference will feature four exciting keynote presentations focused on the theme of "Nonverbal Behavior in Understudied Populations." In addition, junior and senior scholars will present competitively-selected brief talks and posters, one of which will be honored with the Robert (Bob) Rosenthal Poster Award. We look forward to bringing together scholars from different backgrounds in order to facilitate communication, collaboration, and community!

Origins of the Social Mind

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

What are the origins of the social mind? Addressing this question requires integrating insights and methodology from developmental psychology (how does the social mind change over developmental time?), comparative cognition (which aspects of the social mind are shared with other species vs. unique to humans?) and cross-cultural work (what is the scope and scale of variation in the social mind?). Together, research from these disciplines has shed important light on the psychological mechanisms that shape and constrain social reasoning and behavior among humans and other species. Yet, while research within each of these sub-disciplines has made distinct contributions to social psychology, it is rare for such theoretical and methodological diversity to be represented in one place. In this uniquely innovative and interdisciplinary pre-conference, we unite developmental, comparative, and cross-cultural perspectives to showcase research investigating key questions about the foundations of social thought and behavior.

Psychology of Media and Technology

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

📍 Grand Ballroom B, Grand Ballroom Level

We are in the midst of a digital revolution. Social scientists are at the forefront of a major undertaking-- to understand the psychological and societal implications of our new technologies. In this preconference, we bring together researchers from social and personality psychology, computer and data science, communications, and economics who use innovative methods to explore a wide range of topics, including digital inequities, privacy, algorithmic fairness, digital addiction and well-being. To provide a broader perspective on how technology is impacting society, we will hear from speakers who study social media in China and India. The preconference will also include a panel on practical solutions for ethical technology design. Finally, a poster session and data blitz presentations will feature early career researchers.

Psychology of Religion & Spirituality

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

Religion and spirituality are central features of social life. This preconference explores social psychological research on religion and spirituality to understand when, why, and how religion/spirituality affects cognitive, emotional, and behavioral processes. Integrating empirically-based cutting-edge research with interdisciplinary approaches, this preconference showcases state-of-the-field theory, methods, and research that advances a rich and diverse scientific study of religion and spirituality. The study of the psychology of religion is more interdisciplinary than ever, integrating theory and research from personality and social psychology with other disciplines, and deeply engages with the need for sound and diverse science. Once again, to encourage field-building, we anticipate fully funding graduate student registration fees with support from The John Templeton Foundation.

Self and Identity

⌚ 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

The Self and Identity Preconference provides a forum for investigating the complexities of the individual and the collective self. The focus of this year's preconference, "Shifting Selves, Malleable Identities" focuses on the spaces in-between what are often considered discrete identities. Transitioning between genders, experiences of multiracial and racially ambiguous people, the process of aging, acculturation after migration, and religious conversion or exit are all examples of how people's social identities change. Studying the shifts in people undergoing these transitions helps us to better understand the dynamics of identity overall. In addition to several speakers, the preconference will also include presentations by scholarly award winners, a poster session, a data blitz, and a mentoring/networking lunch.

Sexuality

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

📍 Continental 1-3, Ballroom Level

The theme of the ninth annual SPSP Sexuality Pre-Conference is "The History of Sex, Sexuality Research, and Social Change." This theme was chosen due to the location of the 2022 meeting in San Francisco, a city with a rich history of sexual diversity and activism. Presentations from a diverse group of scholars will offer a historical perspective on sex and sexuality research to help attendees better understand the origins of our current sexual climate and to learn important lessons from the past that are crucial to the modern conduct of research in this area. Attendees are invited to submit proposals for individual talks, data blitzes, and posters. Submissions are welcome from scholars at all levels and in any area of sex research. Individual talks are encouraged to match the conference theme, while data blitzes and poster presentations are welcome to focus on any sex research topic.

Shared Reality & Authenticity

🕒 8:00am - 4:30pm, Feb 17

We often turn to others to understand what is true and real—both about the world and about ourselves. Establishing a shared reality is basic to human nature. But when, why, and how do our realities synchronize with the realities of those around us? This preconference assembles a diverse group of speakers to examine how, through their interpersonal interactions, people come to experience both a sense of shared reality and of authenticity. This year, we have continued to assemble an outstanding collection of speakers focusing on an array of special themes like belief synchronization, self versus other perception, and shared conceptualizations of authenticity.

Evolutionary Psychology

🕒 9:30am - 5:30pm, Feb 17

📍 Plaza B, Lobby Level

The SPSP Evolutionary Psychology (EP) Preconference--in its 20th year---provides a forum for discussing cutting-edge research examining how social psychological processes have been shaped by recurring physical and social challenges faced over human evolutionary history. Regularly among the top-attended preconferences, the EP Preconference attracts established researchers, new investigators, and students from around the world. Invited speakers present full-length research talks; slots to present cutting-edge data blitzes and posters are competitive, featuring scholars across career-levels. Presented research covers a broad range of topics, including: cooperation, health, morality, aggression, social cognition, mating, and personality. The EP Preconference fosters collaboration between researchers from various domains of social, personality, and developmental psychology, and provides an optimal forum for introducing psychologists—from students to faculty—to the ways in which evolutionary theory can be applied to cohere disparate findings, generate novel predictions, and ultimately enhance our understanding of psychology and behavior.

Threats to health and well-being, identity, and coping during COVID-19

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 18

Chair: Amanda Sesko

This symposium examines the role of social identities (e.g., race/ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, SES, national identity) and threats to health and well-being in the context of COVID-19, including motivated helplessness in coping with threats, well-being over time, changes in experienced invisibility, and race-based threats while wearing masks.

4 Subsessions

Rethinking Bias Research: Novel Improvements to IAT Methods and Practices

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 18

We highlight methodological advances surrounding the Implicit Association Test (IAT) and call for revising long-held practices that lead to misestimation of implicit attitudes. We offer novel, actionable ways researchers can improve their use of the IAT, and we explore ways in which common practices may undermine the literature and lead to incorrect conclusions about implicit attitudes.

Identity Under Threat: Flexibility and Resilience in Response to Exclusion

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 18

What role do exclusionary experiences play in how historically marginalized groups (HMGs) develop and maintain their identities? Four talks highlight HMGs identity flexibility and resiliency in the face of negative events, contributing to our understanding of the inter-play of exclusion and identity, and emphasizing the need to consider exclusion as an understudied aspect of identity formation.

Collectivism, Social Change, and Collective Problems

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 18

Collectivism is often assumed to increase adherence to traditions and resistance to change. This symposium seeks to challenge this notion with four talks focusing on whether and how different aspects of collectivism facilitate societal-level change and how such knowledge could inform effective resolution of collective action problems (e.g., climate change, public health crises).

Green With Envy: Antecedents and Consequences of Envy Perceptions

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 18

Envy arises from an unfavorable social comparison with another, that often increases harmful behaviors and decreases helping behaviors. Four sets of large studies document the importance of distinguishing between malicious and benign envy, and the impact of envy on help giving and help seeking. We identify self-efficacy and interpersonal trust as key moderators of envy formation and consequences.

Revisiting contact explanations for cross-race recognition deficits

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 18

People are better at recognizing same-race faces compared to other-race faces. According to contact-theories, the effect occurs because people have less contact with members of racial outgroups. Using diverse and cutting-edge methods, this symposium critically reflects upon these contact theories and discusses novel insights on the weak link between cross-race contact and face processing.

Culturally Shaped Selfhood: Distinct Forms, Antecedents, and Consequences

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 18

This symposium pushes the boundaries of existing work on culture and the self by presenting novel evidence on distinct forms of interdependence (Kitayama), dimensions of self-construal in honor regions (Kirchner-Häusler), the role of environmental threats and subsistence modes in self-construal (Vignoles), and consequences of interdependence for physical well-being and resilience (Uchida).

Novel Perspectives on Intergroup Contact

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 18

We will highlight novel perspectives on intergroup contact across various social psychology research domains. Topics to be covered range from theoretical and empirical shortcomings of previous work on contact as a prejudice reduction intervention, to its surprising effects on face processing and social cognition, and beyond to how ingroup and outgroup friendships shape perceived discrimination.

Longitudinal and Predictive Associations between Personality and Health

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 18

📍 Continental 7-9, Ballroom Level

The symposium considers personality-health associations in multiple ways. Speakers will discuss associations across multiple health variables, including BMI and cognitive health. Talks will explore the under-investigated pathway linking health to later personality change. Finally, speakers will consider whether associations differ based on age, race/ethnicity, and socioeconomic status.

Prejudiced atmospheres: Intrapsychic, interpersonal, and systemic factors that impact prejudice

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 18

📍 Plaza A, Lobby Level

When an atmosphere of prejudice invades our space, tracing its origin is as important as are the far-reaching consequences. We examine intrapsychic, interpersonal, and systemic factors that influence prejudice and its impact on minoritized individuals and Whites as well as intergroup outcomes. Together, we highlight processes from 'self-to-society' that exacerbate prejudice and its consequences.

Artificial Intelligence Tools to Study Social Groups: Promises and Risks

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 18

Faced with the increasing adoption of AI tools for large-scale data, this symposium reflects on both promises and risks for studying social groups. After presenting new scientific discoveries uniquely facilitated by AI tools, speakers will highlight the challenges for ensuring algorithmic fairness as well as the risk of AI in spreading both individual and systematic social group biases.

The well-intentioned, yet ironic, consequences of social egalitarianism

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 18

This symposium examines the ironic interpersonal, organizational, and political consequences of social egalitarianism. Over the course of four talks, we discuss instances in which social egalitarians endorse hierarchy maintaining beliefs, exhibit racial biases, support some minorities at the expense of others, and are more or less likely to contribute to Black non-profit organizations.

Examining impression formation beyond the single-session experimental design

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 18

📍 Salon A, Grand Ballroom Level

Much of person perception research utilizes single-session methodologies. Often, participants make impressions of new people and are tested on their impression or attitude change within the same session. The purpose of this symposium is to elaborate on how incorporating time into our research methods allows us to examine how impressions are stored, updated, and retrieved from long-term memory.

Presidential Plenary: Lost Lessons of 1968: Toward a More Diverse Personality Science

🕒 11:00am - 12:15pm, Feb 18

📍 Grand Ballroom B, Grand Ballroom Level

Most personality psychologists recognize 1968 as a seminal year in our history because it marks the publication of Walter Mischel's book, Personality and Assessment, which ignited the person-situation debate. Unfortunately for personality science, scholars in the field seemingly failed to notice many other things that were happening in 1968, including the Civil Rights Movement, the founding of the Association for Black Psychologists, and the address by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., to the American Psychological Association (in late 1967). Personality psychology has, in many ways, existed (or tried to exist) somehow apart from these important historical moments and apart from the ideas of race and ethnicity and the continuing power these aspects of identity have in lives lived in biased settings. Not coincidentally, personality psychology remains a mostly white enterprise. Also not coincidentally, personality psychology risks a far worse consequence than anything Mischel might have devised—utter irrelevance to human behavior. This symposium brings together scholars from diverse institutions and career stages to address the need for enhancing diversity in personality science, to the benefit of personality psychology and diversity science, itself.

Intergroup Contact for Social Impact: Researchers and Policymakers

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

This interactive session details three strategies empirically shown to improve legislators' research engagement: honest brokering, establishing credibility, and storytelling. Attendees will draft a fact sheet outline and an email for distribution to policymakers. By using evidence-based strategies for improving science communication, scientists can increase their social impact.

Beyond Performativity: How to be an Effective Anti-Racist Ally

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

📍 Continental 7-9, Ballroom Level

Conversations about race are inherently uncomfortable. While it is easy to support anti-racism at the abstract level, even staunch allies struggle with defensiveness when it comes to confronting their own privilege. In this interactive session, we will learn how to leverage our own privilege and commit to taking allyship action through a step-by-step plan.

Demystifying Editorial Review: Reviewing, Editing, and Getting Recognition For It

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

Reviewing and editing are key research and service activities, yet pathways (and recognition) for them are not transparent. We present four talks on these topics: reviewing efficiently and effectively, doing so equitably, moving from reviewer to editor, and training students in reviewing. We end with Q&A and a brief survey on how SPSP can further demystify these pathways and opportunities.

Identity, Ideology, and Democracy: New Insights in Political Psychology

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

📍 Continental 1-3, Ballroom Level

Chair: Waleed Jami

This symposium examines the psychology of political attitudes. We show that moral principles and time perception can undergo motivated shifts to alter perceptions of partisan conflicts, whereas national narcissism and the authoritarianism-populism nexus predict anti-democratic beliefs. Country-level differences explain why some nations are higher in authoritarian-populism or national narcissism.

Navigating Race: Inter- and Intra-racial Dynamics and the Challenges of Racial Inequality

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

Chair: Jordan Parker

This session explores specific challenges that arise when navigating racial dynamics and inequality across societal contexts. We examine how race and discrimination influence health, the impact of income inequality on interracial competition, race-specific approaches to racial socialization, and ways to intervene to increase recognition of racial bias.

Testing discrimination's manifestation and pursuing its eradication

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

Chair: Mitchell Campbell

Psychologists have developed numerous theories about discrimination, but many open questions remain about how these theories interface with the real world. These speakers address such questions, exploring how discrimination manifests and/or can be combatted. Together, the talks provide a blueprint for thinking about discrimination and improving efforts to eradicate it.

Promoting Prosocial Behavior via Social Influence: New Tools, New Discoveries

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

How can we encourage people to take action to help their communities and the world? Four talks will explore how new insights about social influence can increase prosocial behavior in the lab and the field, revealing how tools such as interpersonal streaks and optionality can boost charitable donations, and why transparency can both increase and decrease the drive to help.

Disease Avoidance Motivation and Social Cognition During the COVID-19 Pandemic

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

This symposium covers four projects that explore the relationships between infection threats, disease avoidance motivation and social categorization, prejudice, policy attitudes, and affiliation during the COVID-19 pandemic. Results highlight the implications of heightened state and trait disease avoidance motivation for shaping interpersonal attitudes, cognitions, and behavior.

Gender, Race and Death: Subjective and Objective Covid-19 Health Outcomes

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

📍 Salon A, Grand Ballroom Level

Gender and race relate to perceptions of COVID-19, and actual mortality: White men view death risk to be lower than other groups. Countries led by women fare better than countries led by men. Mortality relates to racial segregation in US neighborhoods. Dehumanization of Asians results in lower COVID-19 risk estimates. Overall, societal inequalities contribute to the pandemic's disease burden.

Critical Theories in Social and Personality Psychology

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 18

📍 Grand Ballroom B, Grand Ballroom Level

Chair: Andrew Stewart

This invited session focuses on critical theories in social psychology, such as critical race theory, intersectionality, queer theory, and others. Social psychologists have not widely adopted these critical approaches, potentially because of lack of understanding of what critical theories are and how they can be used in social psychological research. This session brings together four diverse social psychologists who use critical theories in their work, representing multiple areas within social psychology. In their talks, these four social psychologists describe the critical theories that they use to choose research questions, design studies, select methodological frameworks, and interpret their results, hopefully providing role models for incorporating critical approaches in social psychological research. In all, the goals of this invited session include: (1) increase awareness and understanding of critical theories, (2) demonstrate how these critical approaches inform the entire research process, and (3) engage audience members in reflecting on their scholarship using critical frameworks.

“Giving a Great Talk”: Wowing Your Audience in Any Setting

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 18

Giving talks is a core activity of a scholarly career. Based on feedback, SPSP ECs are especially interested in learning how to give a good talk as it relates to many career opportunities. In this session, four speakers who were nominated by their peers as someone who gives ‘great talks’ will join us and share advice on making engaging talks (e.g., conference, job, TED talk) to diverse audiences.

Forming, perceiving and intervening on intergroup attitudes

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 18
📍 Imperial A, Ballroom Level

Chair: Samantha Moore-Berg

Here we present research on predictors of intergroup attitudes and how to intervene on them. Specifically, how environmental context influences racial biases in kids, how policies influence implicit attitudes about transgender people, how social identity and past behavior influence perceptions of antiracist allyship, and how contact can reduce outgroup dehumanization.

What Just Happened? Perception and Reappraisal of Social and Political Events

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 18

Chair: Andrew J. Dawson

This symposium highlights research focused on understanding political and social behavior in four distinct domains. One talk focuses on perceptions of time, one on reappraisal and anti-racist behavior, one on interventions to reduce racial disparities in exclusionary disciplinary practices, and one on gender discrimination in academia.

4 Subsessions

Maintaining satisfaction in romantic relationships: The roles of prosocial immoral behaviors, motivations for sex, and asynchrony between partners

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 18

We present three lines of research examining how satisfaction may be maintained (or decline) in romantic relationships via behaving unethically to help close others, being autonomously motivated or pressured to engage in sex, and differing from one's partner in one's level or progression of commitment over time.

3 Subsessions

- Being communal and self-determined in the bedroom: How and why sexual motivation is associated with satisfaction and desire in romantic relationships.

Better decision processes for better decision making

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 18

Chair: Beidi Hu

People make judgments and decisions largely in the interest of getting it right — or at least being least wrong. However, they too often rely on shaky assumptions, giving rise to decision processes that miss the mark. This session identifies how subtle interventions help (or fail to help) get it right.

Strengths-Based Approaches to Students' Otherwise Marginalized Identities

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 18

📍 Imperial B, Ballroom Level

Across 4 presentations, we demonstrate that 1) recognizing the unique strengths that students often acquire from their otherwise marginalized identities has a variety of beneficial implications for their motivation, academic engagement and persistence, and well-being, and 2) educators can play a particularly influential role in creating such “strengths-based narratives” about these identities.

Cueing Identity-Safety for People of Color in Diverse Contexts

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 18

📍 Plaza B, Lobby Level

Although people of color risk facing bias and devaluation because of their race, contextual and interpersonal cues have the power to promote identity-safety: feeling accepted and valued because of one's group membership. Four talks examine the causes and consequences of Black and Latinx Americans' experiences of identity-safety in interpersonal interactions, STEM classrooms, and the workplace.

The power of interpersonal dynamics in shaping social perceptions and behavior

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 19

Chair: Basima Tewfik

This symposium brings together four projects related to interpersonal dynamics. Speakers will offer novel insight on how the imposter phenomenon leads to greater perceived interpersonal effectiveness at work, how social comparisons influence maintenance goals, how prosocial behavior is perceived as a sign of intelligence, and how interventions can reduce political animosity.

Under the Radar: Subtle Barriers to Gender Equality

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 19

This symposium presents recent empirical research on the ways in which social psychological mechanisms can subtly maintain gender inequality in the domestic and public spheres, while examining diverse outcomes—helping behaviors, stereotypical preferences, objectification experiences, and professional recognition.

Origins and Consequences of Belief in Conspiracy Theories

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 19

The Covid-19 pandemic has made us aware of humanity's potential to rise to a crisis. However, one barrier to this potential is the spread of conspiracy theories. This symposium shares new insights into the origins and consequences of belief in conspiracy theories by examining motives, cognitive styles, entertainment value, and consequences across different contexts.

Advances in Buffering and Reducing Attachment Insecurity

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 19

We present new research on attachment insecurity buffering and reduction. We describe how social support and support provider characteristics enable partner buffering of attachment insecurity. We show that partner responsiveness is critical in promoting relationship-specific attachment security among people with higher general attachment insecurity and reducing trait attachment anxiety.

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 19

Despite a long history of mindset research, some fundamental questions have been surprisingly understudied. Here, we explore four questions from different areas of the field. What are the cognitive processes underlying mindsets? How do mindsets relate to other lay theories? How do we define performance in mindset research? What makes mindset interventions effective for reducing inequality?

Variants of Uncertainty: How Judgments of Uncertainty Impact Decision Making

🕒 6:30am - 7:30am, Feb 19

Uncertainty can be categorized into aleatory (i.e., unknowable) and epistemic (i.e., knowable). How people view the type of uncertainty—and the source of uncertainty—in an environment impacts the decisions they make. In this symposium, we explore the decisions people make under variants of uncertainty and present techniques to improve the decisions people make under uncertainty.

Social judgments and their surprising interpersonal consequences

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 19

📍 Yosemite B, Ballroom Level

Chair: Oliver Genschow

In this symposium, we examine contexts in which social judgments function differently than previously believed. We first explore when women experience greater social latitude and when obese targets experience less negative stereotyping. We then examine when a typically-advantageous factor, mimicry, is harmful and when a typically-disadvantageous factor, dehumanization, is beneficial.

Biases in empathy: Origins and implications

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 19

📍 Imperial A, Ballroom Level

Empathy, the ability to understand and share others' feelings, has well-known advantages for individual and social wellbeing. Here we delineate different types of biases in empathy – bias in empathy to groups, biases stemming from prejudice, social dominance orientation, and biases due to lack of sleep. Implications for society are discussed.

Emerging Research on the Psychology of Egalitarianism

🕒 8:00am - 9:00am, Feb 19

While both pro- and anti-hierarchy motives should influence our social attitudes and behavior, past research focuses on the psychology of anti-egalitarians. This session begins with a theoretical overview on the psychology of egalitarians, followed by cutting-edge empirical work that showcases the role of egalitarianism in promoting recognition of and willingness to address intergroup inequality.

Legacy Program

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

📍 Grand Ballroom B, Grand Ballroom Level

The Society for Personality and Social Psychology is pleased to announce Hazel Rose Markus as the 2022 Annual Convention Legacy honoree. This program is designed to honor legacy figures in social and personality psychology. One of the unique features of the Legacy Program is that it allows presenters to self-identify their work as being part of the honoree's legacy. In order to enhance recognition of our Legacy honoree across all presentation types in 2022, we are asking submitters to identify if their presentation should include the "Legacy" tag as part of the submission process. Common reasons to identify work as part of the Legacy Program include: being connected to the honoree as a former student/postdoc/student of a student/etc., or relying on concepts, theories, and findings strongly associated with the honoree. This will enable the digital program to include the "Legacy" tag alongside other keywords.

Embedding Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Throughout Introduction to Psychology

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

📍 Yosemite B, Ballroom Level

As members of a discipline that thinks deeply about inequity, stereotypes, and prejudice, we want to ensure that students first introduction to our field is responsive to this historical moment. We created a pilot Introduction to Psychology course integrating diversity, equity, and inclusion content throughout each lecture, in explicit learning goals, and in articles selected for the syllabus.

Personality, Affect, Health, and Well-being Across the Lifespan and Cultures

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

📍 Imperial A, Ballroom Level

Chair: Olivia Atherton

The current symposium showcases innovative research being conducted at the intersection of personality traits, affect, health, and well-being. We explore questions related to age differences in personality measurement and personality-health behavior associations, as well as how affect predicts health and happiness among romantic couples and at the societal level.

The Social Psychology of Change Perception: Preconceptions, Prejudice, and Progress

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19
📍 Plaza B, Lobby Level

Chair: Ed O'Brien

We highlight new insights into the social psychology of change perception. Tang finds aggregated explicit bias predicts aggregated implicit bias over time. O'Brien examines when and why people overlook distinctions in piecemeal progress. Gollwitzer shows sensitivities to deviation predict social outcomes. Lopez finds feeling omitted in reforms undermines present well-being.

Exploring Barriers to Workplace Gender Equality

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

Chair: Asher Lawson

This symposium discusses empirical research exploring barriers to gender equality in the workplace. The speakers examine the consequences of perceived gender differences in work devotion, individual differences in reactions to sexual harassment, the gendered consequences of regulatory focuses for leaders, and goal incongruity among women in the legal career pipeline.

How Demographics, Environment, and Social Comparisons Shape Socio-Moral Judgments

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

Chair: James P. Dunlea

What factors shape socio-moral reasoning? Paper 1 illuminates how age predicts people's views of punishment-as-redemption. Papers 2-3 show that childhood (Paper 2), but not cultural (Paper 3), environments predict adults' moral decisions (e.g., utilitarian responding). Paper 4 shows how downward comparisons involving close-others shape adults' perceived closeness toward such individuals.

Self-Esteem Development

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

The talks in the symposium advance knowledge about self-esteem development using longitudinal methods. The first two talks present findings on how global and domain-specific self-esteem influence each other over time (1 preregistered study, 1 meta-analysis) and the next two talks examine how social experiences and eating disorders are linked to self-esteem (1 preregistered study, 1 meta-analysis).

How Race and Class Shape Intimate Relationships

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

This symposium illustrates how fundamental processes in intimate relationships—social support, interdependence, and relationship evaluations—are governed by factors that are far removed from the intimate relationship itself. The findings underscore the need for representation of marginalized populations to achieve a complete and accurate understanding of basic phenomena in close relationships.

Exaggerated polarization and American non-exceptionalism

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

Although polarization is magnified and seen as US-exceptional, categorization of ingroups and outgroups occurs similarly across political systems and cultures. Politicians create divisions where none existed, negative meta-perceptions are exhibited across contexts, partisans overestimate people's opposition to outgroup policies, and trust mediates support for policies proposed by the outgroup.

How do children and adults explain social inequality?

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

The objective of this symposium is to (1) examine how explanations for social inequalities shift from childhood to adolescence to adulthood, (2) discuss the consequences of these explanations for prejudice formation and maintenance, and (3) explore whether intervening on explanatory reasoning can reduce prejudice toward marginalized groups.

A culturally sensitive perspective on making sense of difficulty: Universal themes and cultural variability

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

Four talks integrate culture and identity perspectives to show culturally invariant and culturally variant aspects of how people make sense of difficulty in their lives and while working on tasks and goals and consequences for well-being and action. Our respondents are from WEIRD (Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the U.S.) and non-WEIRD societies (China, India, Iran, Turkey) countries.

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

📍 Continental 1-3, Ballroom Level

Four talks utilize the reverse correlation paradigm to investigate the perceptual basis of hypodescent, race-based perceptions of individuals in positions of authority, the role of category labels in mental representations of novel ingroup and outgroup members, and how individuals visualize socially undesirable traits in a face and the impact of those representations on social decision-making.

How physical spaces reflect and reinforce inequality

🕒 11:00am - 12:00pm, Feb 19

Physical space and inequality shape one another. Four talks will showcase how high-status groups shape space by 1) relying on positive and negative stereotypes to evaluate diverse neighborhoods, and 2) maintaining micro-segregated neighborhoods, and in turn, how space can reinforce inequality by 3) creating disparities in residential belonging, and 4) influencing the prioritization of racial equity policies.

Context Matters: Uncovering New Insights Related to Prejudice and Intergroup Conflict Across Political, Occupational, and Geographical Situations

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 19

Chair: Tyler Jimenez

Though social inequities are ubiquitous, their causes and consequences are contextually dependent. Four presentations explore the contextual nature of inequity, focusing on how racial attitudes influence police militarization and leadership evaluations, how intergroup contact interventions may improve intergroup relations, and how gender norms vary across different national contexts.

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 19

Around the globe, authoritarian leaders are gaining support as democracy erodes. We explore the psychological underpinnings of this troubling trend, specifically the influence of polarization on support for democratic norms, why regions voted for Trump in 2020, linguistic markers of identity strength in The_Donald subreddit, and how authoritarianism leaves traces in data collected by smartphones.

Unpacking the Relationship Between the Political Moderates and Extremists

🕒 2:00pm - 3:00pm, Feb 19

We investigate the relationship between political extremists and moderates. We first show that people are less likely to perceive extremists as deviants. We then show that people are more attracted to extremists with coherent views and are more interested in forming social ties with them. Finally, in turn, political extremists perceive themselves as morally superior compared to moderates.

📍 Salon B, Grand Ballroom Level

The talks illustrate how racial microaggressions are connected with feelings of social exclusion, and how different marginalized populations are prone to the exclusion-resignation link. Moreover, they show how exclusion increases the sympathy and willingness to engage in extreme political measures, and present evidence on the accumulation of incidences of exclusion in the life of terrorists.

Building Strong Foundations in Affect Regulation

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

To build stronger foundations in affect regulation, this symposium challenges some of the basic assumptions in the field. Namely, we examine how often people regulate their emotions, the different ways we measure strategy use, and extend the concept of flexibility across regulatory stages. We close by proposing a novel translational framework that can inspire theoretically-driven interventions.

Analyzing Digital Human Behavior: The Shape of Psychology to Come

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

📍 Yosemite B, Ballroom Level

Technological and analytic innovations are expanding digital representations of human behavior, setting the stage for new perspectives on psychology at multiple levels. However, several key questions must first be answered. This symposium features an emerging generation of scholars in behavioral analytics who will showcase how different types of behavior can be represented and quantified.

🗣️ Speakers

Clemens Stachl Associate Professor, University of St. Gallen

Brit Davidson Assistant Professor of Analytics, University of Bath

4 Subsessions

- Behavioral consistency in the digital age

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

- Sequences of naturalistic data from smartphones describe, explain and predict human behavior.

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

- Digitization of Latent Constructs

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

- Understanding Psychology Through Real-World Behavior: A Century of Language Data

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Behavioral Consequences of Scarcity: An Interdisciplinary Perspective

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

This interdisciplinary session discusses advancements to the psychology of scarcity, or not having enough, from twenty lab and field studies. We explore behavioral consequences of financial constraints, and test interventions to mitigate adverse psychological effects. We also establish the construct of opportunity scarcity and demonstrate zero-sum aversion in situations where resources are scarce.

🗣️ Speakers

Ilana Brody University of California, Los Angeles

Sherry Jueyu Wu Assistant Professor, UCLA Anderson School of Management

4 Subsessions

- Behavioral Consequences and Intervention of Financial Shocks

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

- Do Financial Concerns Make Workers Less Productive?

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

- Causes and Consequences of Perceived Opportunity Scarcity

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 18

- Zero-Sum Aversion

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

The Modern Bias Intervention: New Evidence and Ideal Features

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Social justice advocates and recent psychological work have argued for modern reform to the ways we discuss and combat prejudice and discriminatory behavior. This symposium leverages insights from multiple fields, including social, developmental, and cognitive psychology, to examine new approaches and best practices for interventions targeting both implicit and explicit attitudes.

🗣️ Speaker

Emily Ritchie Graduate Student, Yale University

4 Subsessions

- A Comparative Investigation of Interventions to Reduce Weight Bias on Five Implicit Measures
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19
- 'Distributing' Positivity: Multi-session Efforts Improve Attitudes Better than One-time Interventions
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19
- The Effects of Individual Differentiation in Reducing Implicit and Explicit Racial Biases

Origins and Functions of Social Norms: Micro and Macro Perspectives

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

📍 Plaza B, Lobby Level

Social norms are often thought of as restrictive and limiting of personal freedom. In contrast, this symposium explores the functionality of social norms for personal and collective goal pursuit. In a series of talks ranging micro to macro levels of analysis, we explore diverse norms in diverse contexts to understand when and how norms are functional for individuals and societies.

🗣️ Speaker

David Kalkstein Stanford Univ.

4 Subsessions

- How Norms Structure Thought and Behavior Across Diverse Contexts
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19
- Working-Together Normative Appeals Motivate Greater Contributions to Collective Action Problems
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Machine learning for social good?

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Computational approaches using big data have vast potential for understanding and resolving inequities and injustices, but may also perpetrate injustices themselves. The first half of this interdisciplinary symposium uses machine learning algorithms to understand and target solutions for poverty; the second half investigates ways in which these algorithms learn stereotypes and perpetuate biases.

📣 Speaker

Holly Engstrom University of British Columbia

4 Subsessions

- Different Social Class Background, Different Imagined Future
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19
- Machine Learning Can Improve the Targeting of Humanitarian Assistance
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Antidotes to Loneliness: Innovative Strategies for Promoting Social Connection

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

📍 Imperial A, Ballroom Level

Loneliness is now considered a major public health problem, underscoring the need for innovative strategies for promoting social connection. We present four potential antidotes to loneliness, including a mutual assistance program, training in listening skills, the use of social chatbots, and psychoactive substances such as MDMA (i.e., ecstasy).

📣 Speaker

Dunigan Folk Graduate Student, UBC

4 Subsessions

- Small Acts of Kindness: A Global RCT to Evaluate the KIND Challenge to Reduce Loneliness
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Evaluating the Credibility of Social-Personality Psychology: Evidence from Metascience

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Over a decade after the replication crisis hit the field, we take stock of the state of the evidence base in social and personality psychology. Four projects use different metascientific approaches to assess the credibility of research in our field, from trained coders and automated tools to capture features of articles, to in-depth expert reviews, to large-scale replication audits.

🗣️ Speakers

Sarah Schiavone University of California Davis

Julia Bottesini UC Davis

4 Subsessions

- Who Participates in Studies Published in Social and Personality Psychology?
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19
- Which Authors Make Bolder Claims in Social and Personality Papers?

What Does Diversity Look Like? Understandings and Expectations of Diversity

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

📍 Salon B, Grand Ballroom Level

What is diversity? Will increased diversity change what it means to be American? The present symposium investigates these questions, and explores how different definitions of diversity and race impact attitudes towards diverse outgroups. We discuss how expectations of intergroup threat and immigrant-assimilation shape how Americans respond to increased diversity in their communities.

🗣️ Speaker

Kathryn Howard Univ. of Illinois at Chicago

4 Subsessions

- Ideological variations in attitudes toward, and understandings, of, diversity
🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Contemporary Issues in Growth Mindsets Research

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

📍 Imperial B, Ballroom Level

Growth mindsets can have powerful effects, unlocking human potential and reducing inequality. This symposium features cutting-edge work on growth mindsets. Some work extends growth mindsets in novel directions, identifying benefits and costs. Other work identifies critical ingredients, providing clarity about how to shape individuals and environments to enhance the effects of growth mindsets.

🗣️ Speaker

Jennifer LaCrosse Visiting Professor, Bates College

4 Subsessions

- How mindsets influence cross-cultural interactions in the engineering field

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

New Developments in Reducing Misinformation: Theoretically Informed Field Studies

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

This panel focuses on the process by which misinformation spreads and can be reduced, along with new tools for intervention testing. We examine how person and source factors interact to affect belief in false statements and report on large-scale field studies that use accuracy prompts to reduce the sharing of misinformation on two social media platforms, TikTok and Twitter.

🗣️ Speaker

Lindsay Juarez Director, Irrational Labs

Bridging the Gap Between Philosophy and Moral Psychology: Social Perception of Virtues

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

📍 Continental 1-3, Ballroom Level

This symposium focuses on understanding the connections between psychology and philosophy, while using moral psychology and virtue ethics as an example domain to demonstrate the link between the two disciplines. Discussions focus on diverging conceptualization of various virtues as moral, with an overarching goal of this set of research to explore this gap in the empirical literature.

🗣️ Speaker

Acknowledging racism's legacy: Re-centering history in studying contemporary racism

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Present-day racism and racial inequality in the U.S. are rooted in a historical trajectory. Leveraging multiple methods and levels of analysis, this symposium highlights that the impact of past racism on present attitudes and cognitions is traceable, yet perceptions of past racism and its impact are subjective and motivated, in part to discount the continued legacy of racism today.

Queer, Fat, and Addicted: Health Stigma and Intersectional Identity Processes

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

We examine the role of social identity and identity-related processes in the physical health of sexual and gender minorities, self-identified fat individuals, and people who use drugs. These groups are especially important to study in the context of healthcare because they are explicitly stigmatized in healthcare settings, while also being especially likely to have contact with the healthcare system.

Inside the Grant Panel

🕒 3:30pm - 4:30pm, Feb 19

Panelists

- Kelci Harris, PhD, University of Victoria
- Andy Vonasch, PhD, University of Canterbury
- Valerie Taylor, PhD, Lehigh University
- Alex Tullett, PhD, University of Alabama

Inside the Grant Panel will be presented live as part of SPSP's virtual convention programming 3:30 - 4:30 PM PST VIRTUAL

SPSP is pleased to announce the return of our small grants competition, Inside the Grant Panel, at the 2022 annual convention.

After an initial review of all submissions, Inside the Grant Panel will showcase the grant applications of the three finalists being evaluated LIVE by a panel of experienced social and personality grant reviewers on factors such as significance, research methods, innovation, budget, etc. In the end, the expert reviewers will pick a winner to receive a $3,000 grant for their research. The two runners-up will each receive $1,000.
